

I'm from France and I have to move back there for a year for professional reasons (I'm an actor). The thing is that I'm in love with my apartment and I don't want to lose it so I decided to sublet it. That way I'll get it back when I return. Also, I furnished it myself completely from scratch and I don't want to sell everything or pay for storage and buy everything again when I come back.

I am subletting my room in a house in Vancouver because I am traveling and like to come home to a home that I love and have made my own. Subletting makes it affordable to live somewhere else. Also, as someone who likes to spend a lot of time in the US, it is important for me to maintain ties in Canada (i.e. I can show the border guard that I have an address and bills in my name in Canada).

We rent this flat because it brings in extra income, and we meet interesting people. Right now, two Danes are living in the flat.

I am moving to a new house in NYC and do not want to break my lease.

I AM SUBLETTING BECAUSE I FOUND A JOB IN TORONTO. FUNNY THING IS THAT I HAVE NOT MOVED TO THE APARTMENT YET, I AM DUE TO MOVE ON THE 12TH OF NOVEMBER, AND MY STUFF IS STILL IN STORAGE. I AM NOW LIVING IN A HOSTEL AND I HAVE TO FIND A NEW PLACE IN TORONTO. RENT AN APARTMENT THAT I HAVE NOT OCCUPIED AND MOVE MY STUFF....

I am going to study in France and I am moving to a new house in NYC and do not want to break my lease.

IT'S ABSOLUTELY STUPID TO EVEN THINK ABOUT THE REASONS AS MANY SUBLETTERS ONLY YIELD PART OF THE ACTUAL RENT WE PAY TO LANDLORDS. IT'S NOT A FUN GAME.

BLETTING MY APARTMENT BECAUSE I HAVE BEEN TRANSFERRED BY MY COMPANY AND SUBLETTING IS THE MOST ECONOMICAL MEANS OF DISCHARGING MY FINANCIAL OBLIGATION.

I bought a condominium and I am moving to a new house in NYC and do not want to break my lease.

I am actually moving to a new house in NYC and do not want to break my lease.
